

Eric Pan, MD, MSc

Center for Information Technology Leadership (CITL) and Harvard Medical School

Eric Pan, MD, MSc, is the Senior Scientist at the Center for Information Technology Leadership (CITL) and Associate Director of CITL's National Library of Medicine (NLM) Informatics Fellowship Program. He has been leading CITL's analytic and modeling efforts since its formation. He is an Instructor in Medicine at Harvard Medical School. He has a private integrative medicine practice in San Diego, California.

He received an MD from Saint Louis University School of Medicine and trained in Primary Care and Internal Medicine at Cambridge Hospital in Cambridge, MA. He received an MSc in Medical Informatics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology during his NLM fellowship at the Children's Hospital Informatics Program in Boston.