

Josh Lemieux

Director, Personal Health Technology, Markle Foundation

Josh Lemieux is an expert in internet applications to help consumers understand health and health care. For the past four years, he has worked on research and policy development for electronic personal health records under the auspices of the Markle Foundation's Connecting for Health collaborative. In previous positions, he directed the launch of health benefit decision support tools at WebMD and several interactive applications at WellMed, Discovery Channel, and Mayo Clinic. He began his career writing for United Press International in Brazil, and worked several years as a correspondent for The Associated Press, assigned to the Mexican border.